

In memoriam Dr. Joan S. Davis

On 11. January 2016 Joan Davis passed away. In 2011, on a crucial moment in our Stichting's history she took up contact with us and since then a stream of activities was set on.

We are ever so thankful for her impulse and encouragement to persevere the research on biological transmutation.

It must have been in the nineties that Joan Davis, being somewhere in London crossing a street, was encountered by a woman who pressed her a paper in the hand saying: this will interest you! It was a paper about Kervran dealing with the phenomenon of biological transmutation. From that moment on up till her last days Joan worked to get this phenomenon accepted or proved as she considered it essential in life-processes especially in agriculture.

In 2002 she wrote an excellent article in the Hagia Chora nr.14. : "Lebensstrategie der Natur: das Fehlende aus dem Vorhandenen erschaffen"

(<http://www.geomantie.net/authors/1163/view.htm>) a courageous deed for a well-known scientist! In 2011 she contacted us asking to help funding for research on this theme (www.sampo.ch/index.php?id=920). Thanks to her efforts things got into movement and in 2013 an elaborate research was started under the title "Biologische Transmutation und ihr Einfluss auf die Bodengesundheit" in the Hiscia in Arlesheim, Switzerland.

This November we studied the unpublished papers of Johannes Neher, a geologist, in which she hoped to find also confirmations of the existence of this phenomenon; it took a long time before we found out where the papers were but she didn't give up saying: Neher....und näher. In December she discussed with a colleague the possibility of getting proof from a research on dried fruit.

In loving remembrance we want to cite the following verse by R. Steiner

Feel, how we are lovingly gazing
Into the heights, which are now
Calling you to different work.
Give to your deserted friends
Your strenght from spirit regions.

Hear the request of our souls,
Sent to you in trust;
We need here for earthly work
Strong strength from Spirit-lands,
For which we thank our deceased friends

For the board, Sophia Holleman
